A railroad man stated that the movement of troops to the Schweinrich (N 54/ U 22) training area terminated on 23 April 1951. No troop movements were noticed in the training area on 3 May, with the units staying in the restricted area. The Schweinrich-Zechlin road had not yet been blocked to civilian traffic. A motorcycle unit of about 25 motorcycles, two-thirds of which were equipped with sidecars, was engaged in cross-country driving in the area northwest of Neu-Lutterow. Six 75 - mm AA guns were emplaced on both sides of the Schweinrich-Zechlin road on the northern perimeter of the artillery range. A new observation tower was seen northeast of the artillery range.
